“ When I first heard the news of Beverly’s passing, I thought about what a gift it was to have known her when she was younger. She was super cute, with blonde hair and blue eyes, and reminded me of the girls the Beach Boys wrote songs about. She had a disarming smile and laughed easily. But what I remember most about Bev is that she was always kind; she had a gentleness about her that came from deep within. The last time I saw Beverly was at a social event about five years ago. Despite the battle she had been waging with an insidious disease for most of her adult life, she still had a warm smile and a kind word to share. Many things had changed over the years, but the essence of who Beverly was remained intact. She had won that battle. Rest in peace, Beverly. Nancy
