“ He taught me how to ice skate and roller skate; he pulled me on a sled through the snow. He taught me to appreciate good food and the little things in life; to do unto others as I would have them do unto me and that conceited people smelled bad. He taught me any job worth doing was worth doing well, to always be honest and that my word and my name were my bond. He taught me how to laugh and appreciate sarcasm and when I had the chance to be right or kind to be right kindly. He taught me how to dance. He was the best dad a girl could ever have. I love you dad.

“ Richard Sintz was my first best friend and the grandpa I never had. We went on dates to McDonald's when I was little and danced in the driveway together for as long as I can remember. I'm extremely saddened by his passing. I will always remember my wonderful friend "Mr. Neighbor". Love and condolences to the family.
