“ Dear Chris,
I don't know what to say to comfort you in this terrible time. I've known you 10 years, and Staci was the one that made you the happiest..her memories and love will always be there. No one can take that away from you. I love and support you my friend.
Love, Clare

“ Dear Chris, I am so very sorry for your loss of your true love and best friend, I had not gotten to know you guys yet but heard many good things about both of you from Shawn. He shared with me about the people he cared about from working at the Sunset The one thing that has always stuck out from what he shared with me was that you guys really and truly loved each other so much, the kind of love and devotion that is rare these days. I could see and feel that love when I saw your beautiful wedding pictures. Even though I did not know Stasi I could see and feel that she was so very special, and I just want you to know that you and the boys are all being thought about and cared about during this unbelievably difficult and heartbreaking time in your lives. We know there are no words and nothing anyone can do, but just know you all are loved and that Stasi's life has touched so many, even those she has never met.

“ Chris,
We wish that we could turn back the clock for you, to just have one more minute, one more day, one more I love you. Your heart will forever be broken, however you are not alone in this. We will be there for you and the family as much as you need. There is nothing like a love from your wife, trust me we know. If we could take away your pain, we would. Hold onto each memory. GOD SPEED STASI!
We love you dearly!

“ Every time I saw Stasi, no matter what the occasion was, she always told me she loved me when we parted. My last words from her where "I love you Tas." That has made me realize how important it is to tell the ones we love , we love them, because it could be the last thing we say to them. Even if it's a simple phone call or visit, like it was with us. Always end with the words I LOVE YOU!! I'm glad she heard them from me, as I did from her!! She will be missed dearly xoxoxoxo Stas!
I love you!!!
