“ This hits differently. I remember countless moments on the softball field laughing with Timmy. He always had his family there to cheer him on and Mamma Ralphie became our family. I can't imagine what you all have gone through the past few years but please know you're in our thoughts and prayers always.

“ It's hard to think of Timmy being gone, he's been a part of my life for the past 10+ years. I take great pride in calling him a friend. Just seeing him, regardless of his health battles, would always light up the day regardless of any other factors.

He had that infectious smile and momentary lack of intelligence that immediately endeared him to you. It didn't take long before he became family. On the field, he was just a big dumb animal of amazing. He was ridiculously talented; I swear he hit the ball so hard that it would break in half. However, you would never see him without that goofy smile, he loved every second he was out there playing.

His enthusiasm made me love being part of the same team, I looked forward to hanging out with my buddy every time. At games, his family became my family. To this day, I still can't resist yelling out "MOM!!" whenever I see Lisa. He was a treasured member of his own family, my softball family, and his adopted family the Lempo-Axtens.

My fondest memory of Tim will forever be the time he made me fly. I had just hit a grand slam home run. I tried my best to act like I was too cool to be happy. When Timmy charged on to the field to give me a hug, he wrapped his arms around me, then proceeded to pick all 350+ lbs of me up off the ground for what felt like an eternity. Someone my size shouldn't be up in the air like that, and I flailed my legs around and cried for him to put me down. Thankfully he was merciful and let me down, otherwise I might still be up there.

I will forever miss him. Playing ball doesn't have the same enjoyment as it did when he was around. I am honored to call him my friend, and I hope to see him once again. I could use a hug and another chance to fly.
